The New Railroad.

The newspapers of the territory are constantly agitating the extention of the Santa We Central through to Durango. traversing the rich and fertile valley of San Juan county. New Mexico is about to enjoy the fruits of the agitation of railroad construction, and the following, taken from the New Mexican, will be cheering news to our fruit and grain growers and horse and cattle preeders Such road would make an outlet for our vast deposits of coal and other resources that are now practically dormant. San Juan county is just now attracting attention and is growing and developing faster than any other portion of New Mexico that is not favored by railroads. -"The reconnoissance preliminary to a survey for the extension of the Santa Fe Central Railway from Torrance, its southeastern terminus, to Roswell, the principal town on the Pacos Valley & Northeastern Railroad in southeastern New Mexico, has been made. The extension will be between 90 and 100 miles in length and will be of easy and cheap construction as it runs through a level plains country. The speedy construction of this line is very probable.
